

WHAT IS CLAIMED IS:

1. A filter assembly mounted in a coffee maker, comprising:
 - an open container comprising a handle, a central well, two side grooves in communication with the well, two hollow legs at the underside, the legs being in
 - 5 communication with the grooves, and an interior, annular shoulder;
 - a disc-shaped seat having its edge rested on the shoulder and including a central opening and an intermediate, annular raised section;
 - a disc-shaped silicone rubber member including an annular flange at the underside with the edge of the central opening fastened therein, a central hole,
 - 10 and a raised edge fitted on the raised section; and
 - a filter cup rested on the silicone rubber member and including a plurality of meshed openings on the bottom and a top annular flange rested on the container,
- wherein coffee made in the filter cup is adapted to flow into the well through
- 15 the meshed openings and the central hole prior to flowing out of the container through the grooves and the legs once the well is full of coffee.